Area Business Leaders Offer Pro Bono Consultation for Small Business Owners

Denver Business Advisors (DBA) is a new, centralized resource for small business owners to access consultation from proven leaders in the marketplace. DBA will offer pro bono consultation in the areas of law, finance and accounting, sales and marketing, and management to help emerging businesses navigate the potential pitfalls of small business ownership.

Jim Thomas, Chairman and Founder of DBA and Director and Shareholder at Minor & Brown, P.C., will advise on legal matters. Asa J. Beck, President of Cogent Strategies, LLC will advise in the area of finance and accounting. Teah Bennett, CEO and Founder of I*LEVEL Incorporated, will advise on management issues; and Colleen Stanley, President of SalesLeadership, Inc., will advise on sales and marketing.

“Small business is the backbone of the Colorado economy,” said Jim Thomas. “DBA was established to help these businesses out of the belief that, as business leaders, we have the responsibility to be good stewards of our economy and our community.”

Initially, five business owners will be selected to receive consultation every 60 days. Colorado-based companies in business for a minimum of three years are eligible to apply for consideration at www.denverbusinessadvisors.com.
